

Leaving a gift in your will

It's not just famous rock stars and celebrities who can leave a legacy... would you consider leaving a gift in your will to Blythe House Hospicecare and Helen's Trust?

When you consider writing a will, your loved ones will of course be your top priority, but many people also wish to leave a gift (also known as a legacy) to a cause or charity that means a lot to them.

Leaving a gift in your will not only benefits your chosen charity, but could also lower the inheritance tax payable on your estate.

However big or small, whether you choose to leave a fixed amount (pecuniary) or a percentage of your estate (residuary) to Blythe House and Helen's Trust in your will, you can be assured that it will make a lasting difference to our patients, their carers and families.

One in ten of our patients are cared for as a direct result of money being left to us, providing vital income to ensure that we can continue to provide free care and services to those who need it.

Blythe House was founded in 1989, thanks to a £1,000 legacy left by Stan Blythe to Reverend Betty Packham.

A gift in your will can be transformational, and help to shape hospice services to meet the needs of our community.

Our 24/7 Hospice at Home service began in 2016 as a result of a legacy, providing vital care and support to patients in our local community who wish to die in the comfort of their own home.

Not all gifts in wills are monetary; you may wish to leave much-loved items in the hospice's name. For example, someone very kindly bequeathed boxes of model railway artefacts and memorabilia, so that we could sell them via the hospice's eBay store to raise funds.
